See, King v. Peterson, supra, at 779-80, 104 S.Ct. 2174. This argument is supported by the distinction between the following two paragraphs in section 6-111(2) which have been added to the Code since the Supreme Court interpreted the former version of § 6-111 in McClintic-Marshall

Co., supra, in 1936. When subsection (2) of this section applies, no new cause of action is created against the seller by the mere sale of property. On the contrary, the defendant's liability is measured by what he agreed to and the contract is his remedy for the buyer's failure to perform. This subsection applies when "there is no written agreement between the parties as to the security for payment." A contract for the sale of property, or for a loan, will not be enforced by action or defense against the seller or creditor in a suit by the buyer or borrower. Section 6-111(2), Tenn.Code Ann.
