Q: Is it possible to implement a watery drop effect with leaflet markers? I have a large number of markers on a map (1000+) and I'd like to achieve a watery drop effect when the user clicks the marker. I want it to do something like this (sorry I can't find the original source) Is it possible? A: If you are looking for some kind of drop effect it is best to use leaflet.markercluster library. The example code from the author's website: // A marker cluster control that closes itself when you click on a marker. // var clusterOptions = { radius: 80 * 1000, // The markers in this layer should be excluded from the cluster's // drop effect. excludeFromCluster: true, // The markers in this cluster need to mark visible in the cluster's // drop effect. This can be done by setting the options of the // cluster's layer as well as the options of each of the markers' // L.Marker. visibleInLegend: false } var clusterMarkers = L .markerClusterGroup(cluster Options) .addTo(clusterMaps) // When the cluster is clicked, close it. .on('click', function (cluster) { // The radius option specifies the radius in pixels, not // degrees. cluster.bringToTop(); return false; }); You need to create a cluster of your markers and you can achieve the effect you want with the "bringToTop" method. Well Iraqi special forces launched a major operation in central Mosul on Saturday in which hundreds of militants and foreign fighters, most of them from the Islamic State group's local affiliate, were killed, a military official said. At least 400 militants and 30 foreign fighters were killed, spokesman for the Rapid Response Division Brigadier General Yahya Rasoul told Al Jazeera. "The fight is ongoing. Search and clear operations are still going on," he said. The special forces launched their operation after heavy clashes and air strikes against the jihadist group in the Zayouna neighbourhood, west of Mosul. As of Saturday night, at least 80 positions belonging to the militants were destroyed, eight of them by tank fire and the rest by air strikes, a military statement said. In total, 19 military vehicles were destroyed in the attack, it said. Mosul, Iraq's second largest city, fell to IS in June 2014 in the country's worst military defeat since the US-led invasion in 2003. {articleGUID} The fighters holed up in Mosul's Old City are being targeted by fighter jets and led to fight outside their stronghold in an attempt to keep up pressure on them inside. The offensive, launched on October 17, is ongoing and the first phase has delivered a major blow to the militants' presence. The US Central Command estimates that some 3,000 IS fighters are still in Mosul, as well as some 1,000 foreign fighters who are attempting to fight their way through the city to Syria, in part to join IS there. Some

400 civilians are also trapped in the Old City, according to the United Nations. Sources: Al Jazeera, United NationsWithout a doubt, one of the greatest ever performances by an American goaltender came in January of 1983. In a game against the Boston Bruins the New Jersey Devils had lost to the Bruins at the start of a three game road trip. The Devils had played well at home, winning their previous two games. They were a mediocre team though, with a few surprises amongst their top players. The Devils were led by rookie John McPhee and senior captain Steve Yzerman, although both had played poorly in the first two games, the Devils had been able to win both with good goaltending. The Bruins though, were led by none other than Wayne Gretzky, who was in the midst of his 21 goal, 88 point, regular season scoring streak, which
