Download ELDEN RING manual from our fast server. Extract archive with 7-zip and open the file: README.txt Set the resolution of the game (default is 75). Start the game, if necessary, update the game. Have fun! Screenshots And NOW GAME - ELDEN RING for Windows (thanks to PYTOPICS forum) MOD: that I am using in my Simple Update Mutation to send these requests directly from the java client. This solution works very well as it isolates my code that handles the mutation. The issue I am having however is that these requests (total requests count is usually around 100 per day) seem to be going through several pipelines before being accepted, I suspect this is because of the very heavy traffic on the Firebase servers. Here is an example of the JSON that is sent to the server: The endpoint for the mutation is in red and the full JSON parameters are sent on the right side of the screen. The three first parameters are generic we can assume that they are static (following the naming conventions of the Firebase User Guide). The two remaining parameters are the ones that I would like to change in order to return a bigger count for my results. In this situation I can consider that the totalCourses endpoint will return me the last course that a specific user took. In that case I know that the number of assignments for that course can be obtained by querying the object coursesAssignedToAssignmentToCourse endpoint (I know this because I actually checked it from the firebase log). Using the Firebase samples I have found out that the following would work as a way to achieve what I am trying to do. You can check out the Firebase google-services.json file (also in the zip above) with the sample app if you want to play around with it and see what is going on. As you can see I have created the three parameters that I need and have added them to the request
