The data enables new features such as “Hyper Movement,” a set of fully reactive animations, that reacts differently depending on whether the player is high or low on the pitch. Players feel more nimble and more powerful when they’re high and the kicks they deliver feel snappier and have more presence and force. The overall result is a richer, more visceral experience for players. “There are many moments during a football match when you need to be bold. Whether attacking the opponent’s goal or picking out a pass, the small decisions you make can significantly affect the outcome of a match,” said Alex Thurzo, Producer at EA SPORTS FIFA. “Now, for the first time, players have the tools to make winning moves an easier task with Dynamic Player Trajectories and Defensive Responses.” FIFA 22 also introduces a new Quick Touch Control system that places the player’s dynamic controls onto the field, making it easier to weave through players and control the ball through tight situations. Players will feel as if they’re surrounded by moving human players — even when they’re alone, with the human opponents blending realistically with the environment. Football is complex, and FIFA 22 challenges players to master more skills and techniques. Each of the 22 real-life players has their own individual skillset and varying degrees of success. FIFA 22 is only available in a bundle on the Xbox One family of devices and Windows 10 PC. Fans can purchase either the FIFA 22 Ultimate Edition or FIFA 22 Standard Edition for $99.99, or the FIFA 22 Standard Edition for $59.99, on Xbox One, Windows 10 PC and Mac. Powered by Artificial Intelligence Real Player Motion Tech FIFA 22 introduces “Real Player Motion Tech” to create more realistic and immersive gameplay and fan experience. The goal is to improve upon the Player Flow, Using Player Motion and Artificial Intelligence to bring players to life. This technology enables the following features in FIFA 22: New Player Flow Technology that reacts differently depending on whether the player is high or low on the pitch. This makes players feel more nimble and powerful when they’re high on the pitch. New Combined Specials that react differently depending on whether the player is high or low on the pitch. This makes the gameplay much more intense and physically demanding.
