(Id. at p. 743.) *1124 In Garibaldi, supra, 182 Cal. App.3d at pages 378-379, the court affirmed the award of spousal support where there was no reason to conclude that the trial court erred in awarding support. The court noted that the wife was not employed and lived in a single room in her parents' home. The children were in their 20's and the wife suffered from cancer. The court observed that the wife was not voluntarily underemployed, stating that "[t]here is no compelling evidence in the record to support a conclusion the parties could have made substantially greater financial contributions during the pendency of the dissolution action."
