When you hit a player with a tackle, "Power Evaluation" takes place. FIFA creates a target marker on the player who receives the tackle, and the player who lands the tackle is evaluated based on his most recent form. The more successful tackles that a player lands, the higher his score will be. If the player who lands the tackle is fatigued, his score will reduce based on his current fatigue level. The same goes for aerial duels in which the player who lands the tackle will be penalised with less cards and the opponent will be given a penalty.

FIFA 22 introduces "Power Ev." "Power Ev." takes the form of new gameplay features called "Evolution Groove". When this system is implemented, FIFA will use player movements, tackles, acceleration, aerial duels and more to establish a "Possibilities Space" using the collected motion capture data. All of these motions are displayed on-screen. This Possibilities Space is further enhanced using a number of different systems and camera angles. The closer a camera is to the pitch, the more "Evolution Groove" opportunities are available. The closer the camera is to the action, the more chance there is of there being "Evolution Groove" opportunities. A new "Clipped Player Position" system is also introduced, which replaces the old "Target Position" system. If a player falls to the ground and receives an injury, the system will adjust his position on the pitch to the nearest "Clipped Player Position" and he will be removed from the pitch, unless the referee allows him to continue. FIFA 22 introduces "Damage 2.0". When this system is implemented, clubs will be able to earn more points when a player experiences an injury. The higher the level of injury, the more points will be awarded. Additionally, the player's stamina on the pitch will be affected according to how badly he is hurt. FIFA 22 introduces "Manager AI" for the first time in an official licensed football game. "Manager AI" will allow the manager to take specific actions, such as substitutions, call-offs and formation changes, to help guide his team to success. These actions are based on how the manager conducts himself on the pitch. The more aggressive the manager is on the pitch, the more likely he is to be
