But before I would download theÂ .Conventional gasoline and diesel fuels contain sulfur because of the presence of sulfur-containing compounds in crude oil used to make such fuels. Such sulfur-containing compounds are precursors for sulfur oxides when fuel is burned. Because of increasingly stringent air quality standards for the control of sulfur oxides, great efforts are underway to provide hydrocarbyl substituted sulfones as additives to gasoline and diesel fuels. Such hydrocarbyl substituted sulfones are effective in reducing sulfur oxide emissions when burned, because they undergo a "fuel-sulfur" reaction to form hydrocarbyl sulfones having essentially higher sulfur contents and hence having less sulfur oxides generated on combustion. In the process of preparing the additives from the hydrocarbyl substituted sulfones, it is generally desirable to separate the desired product from the reaction medium comprising a crude sulfone product in admixture with unreacted reaction medium. Various methods for the purification of crude sulfones in order to obtain these sulfones in the form of substantially pure products are known. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,829,505 teaches that crude dioctyl alkyl sulfones may be treated with an alkylating agent and hydrogen to form the corresponding alkyl sulfones. In another method
