“HyperMotion technology is a system designed to study complex movements in detail,” commented

Taiji Yamada, FIFA Technical Officer. “Players will be able to know and understand their game, making them aware of the difference between game and life.” The new feature will be available in both club and online modes of FIFA 22 across all game modes. The benefit of the new technology is that it will give each player a truer representation of their real-life movements on the pitch. Last year, FIFA 21 utilized the EA Sports FIFA 20 Pro Player Template (FEPP) engine, designed to run across all devices, platforms and ages. EA Sports will continue to update the EA SPORTS FIFA 20 Pro

Player Template with the data and functionality of FIFA 22. Players will now enjoy the same gameplay and experience across all platforms, all ages, on and off the pitch. They’ll feel the speed, excitement, and physicality of the game as if they were in the stadium. In addition to providing the benefits to players, EA has also been able to collect more data on the performance of the FEPP engine, particularly in clubs. EA’s sport performance team will continue to enhance FEPP with updates that improve the match engine, including all the new data and developments from FIFA 21.

The new training features include: FIFA Manager Club Club vs. Club Matches – One of the new additions to the FIFA Manager Club app is club vs. club matches.
