She just did it on Twitter, but the chat we had with her and with the leaders of our community in Sulaimani last week is real, and it may also have something in it for the future of Kurdistan. MUFTI'S VIEW First, here's what the mufti says about the ISIS attack on Erbil: In the "ISIS gangs" attack on Erbil, Erbil and the world are now powerless to defend themselves - those who raise the claim that they "defend" Shomal, Gharz, Der Kurdistans and "all and everyone" must be shown how and why exactly this is so. As for those who are saying that this is "the same for all Kurdish people". And the Kurdistan government claims that this is "a personal, familial matter" for the families of the two journalists who were kidnapped, 'disappeared' and murdered after the ISIS gang attack on their driver ... may God hasten the day when they are buried together with their bodies to determine the truth ... and day when the families of those killed and kidnapped will be told the truth. Also - let us hope - if it is the same for the families of the people who were killed, then let us hope these families will be made aware of their fates, so they know that their relatives have been killed, and thus consider that they too must now be hidden. My concerns are with the Kurdish people in Iraq as a whole, and as leaders who are trying to assume responsibility for all

Simon Pegg says he and Spooks co-star Richard Armitage's sad demise was "truly shocking" as he paid tribute to the star who died Friday. The Scot, who played Ken Campbell in hit BBC series Spooks from 2006 to 2015, died peacefully at the end of his life after suffering from heart and prostate disease, The Times reports. We will all miss him so much. Our deepest condolences go to his family." Pegg, who was born on July 8, 1949 in his native Edinburgh, has also starred in films including Run Fatboy Run with superstar David Beckham, Eight Below, Shaun of the Dead, Hot Fuzz and Star Trek.
