Daily Archives: February 20, 2011 We're getting ready for the annual Sowerland Writers Conference, scheduled for April 7-10, 2011. It's always an exciting time for me, not just because of the fabulous conference and the amazing workshop leaders, but because I get to see what's going on in the writing world. Inspiration Corner It was heartwarming to see the wonderful response to the guest post I wrote for the blog of Tara Danan, co-founder of the Sowerland Writers Conference and incredible writer. Her passion for writing was evident to everyone who read it. Tara has kindly offered to share it here, for all to read. May it give you the same pleasure it gave us: * * * * By Tara Danan I want to write something that will make a difference. What effect will my writing have? I hope to touch the reader's heart and help them recognize who they are. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader think, feel or laugh. My writing will make a difference if the reader needs my book. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader dream about something. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader turn the page because they want to find out what happens. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader cry. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader stop and think. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader laugh. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader fall in love with the characters. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader want to know more about the characters. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader think about the part they play in society. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader want to take care of the environment. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader feel sad. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader look at their own life. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader forget about the world for a little while. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader want to learn more about a culture. My writing will make a difference if it makes the reader want to travel and experience life

Rhabdomyosarcoma of the breast: immunohistochemical and ultrastructural study. Breast rhabdomyosarcoma (RMS) is a rare malignancy that usually occurs in childhood. Histologic features are characteristic and helpful for diagnosis. We report an RMS of the breast in an adult patient. Histologic and immunohistochemical studies showed abundant rhabdomyoblastic differentiation. Ultrastructural examination showed the presence of mitochondrial micro-tubules with 9 nm in diameter. The diagnosis of breast RMS is based on a combination of histologic, histochemical, immunohistochemical, ultrastructural and flow-cytometry techniques. I'm having the same issue with the OM 550's. I've tried turning off the Bose in the car for a half hour just to see if that might help and not make any difference. There was a thread on this a few years back, but most people seemed to just assume that the new Bose system was at fault. I know that I have an AudioSource control in my settings, so maybe there is a set max somewhere that could be limiting it? Or maybe this is really just a case of faulty hardware? I don't think this would be the Bose system, since the system it is replacing is an analog module. I would first check the Max Level setting on the AudioSource component in your controller and make sure it isn't on some crazy high level
