As Hideo Kojima noted, "Metal Gear itself is a brand that stands for the next generation of gaming," at E3 2018 last June. Despite the announcements of Metal Gear Survive, and Phantom Pain, he said that the Metal Gear team is "still devising the next generation of games." He went on to say that after MGS5, the Metal Gear series "will be a series that is not only a Konami-created franchise, but a series in which many series designers from across Japan and other regions will work to create the next generation of games for us." He also talked about the future of the series, saying, "I would like to have fans who always play our games. We are also working on a variety of things, including a new series. There are also many new ideas." Kenichiro Nagao also talked about "the game we've been able to announce for the first time," hinting that we will be seeing the long-awaited game in the series in the near future. Finally, Kojima and Nagao talked about the new recruit, and he said, "She's excellent. The industry is changing, so she's very good at digital music. As a producer, I can do more with her than the large-scale teams." Kojima also teased that "she's unique."Evaluation of flow cytometry data for induction of micronuclei in root meristem cells of Allium cepa L. seedlings.
